Good things about school uniforms. Good things about uniforms. Good reasons for school uniforms.

While school uniforms still remain scarce in Canadian public schools, there are many countries around the world, including the United Kingdom, Japan and Thailand, that recognize the benefits of school uniforms for all ages. Shirts, ties, and blazers are the norm for a lot of these schoolchildren, while others wear an interpretation of their country's traditional garments. Here at Pear Tree Elementary, we have a much more practical and modern combination of polo shirts and pants here. Nevertheless, the advantages of wearing school uniforms - whatever they consist of - are plentiful and well-documented.

1. Cohesion and Equality School uniforms mean that all students wear the same clothing, helping to level out the playing field. This removes any preconceived ideas about what to wear, allowing for greater group cohesion and commonality. As a result, uniforms demonstrate a clear message of equality. Modern schools introducing trousers for girls is an important part of this equality, showing that all children - regardless of gender, socioeconomic background, or otherwise - are all the same and come from the same starting point.
2. Group Identity Seeing their peers wearing the same uniform as them also encourages children to develop a stronger concept of group identity. As such, school uniforms allow students to feel part of something bigger than themselves. This, in turn, helps children recognize the value of working together towards a common goal rather than focusing on their individual objectives.
3. Increased Safety School uniforms help teachers and school administrators identify who is a student and who isn't, even from a distance. This makes it easier for them to keep students safe and away from unauthorized areas. Likewise, staff and students can soon identify anyone on the school grounds without a uniform as an outsider or possible intruder by their lack of uniform. Increased safety is also a reason why school uniforms are good for field trips as well as on-site learning. Children wearing school uniforms are easier to spot and keep track of among large crowds, making the chance of a child wandering off without a teacher noticing far less likely.
4. Dress Code Equality When schools allow children to wear their own clothes to attend school, this creates the need for a long list of unacceptable clothing variations that staff must check for every day. Such dress codes are often harsher for girls than for boys, with everything from skirt lengths to shoulder straps coming under scrutiny. What's more, enforcing dress code policies often means sending children to the office for administrators to determine whether they've violated the code or not. Not only does this create an atmosphere of distrust and defiance within the school, but it also wastes a lot of everyone's time. School uniforms avoid a lot of this policing by creating a standardized dress code that's easy for all children to follow. Without any possibility of misunderstanding what is and isn't appropriate, children won't spend time awaiting decisions about their clothing choices and will be in the classroom learning instead.
5. Reduced Potential for Bullying One of the biggest advantages of wearing school uniforms is how it can cut down on this kind of bullying. While wearing a school uniform creates a sense of community and equality, allowing children to choose their own school clothes can create divisions and highlight disparities. Unfortunately, a child's clothing choices can offer school bullies more motives to make fun of them, talk about them with other students, or even hurt them in a physical way. School uniforms help to reduce the chance for this by making everyone wear the same clothes. Students also have to wear the same uniform every day. This means that socioeconomic differences between students won't be as obvious as they might be if a child were to wear the same non-uniform clothes every day.
6. Streamlined Morning Preparation School uniforms are a godsend for parents trying to get their children ready for school. Mornings can be chaotic enough without the added pressure of choosing or double-checking your child's wardrobe choices for a day at school. In contrast, when your children wear school uniforms, there's no chance of forcing your child to change out of their unsuitable clothes or waiting for them as they pick out an outfit.
7. Safe and Practical Allowing children free rein over their school clothing choices can also create issues with health and safety, while their choices might not be the most practical for the weather either. School uniforms make sure that children dress appropriately, in clothes suited to a day of learning. A simple school uniform avoids any chance of them tripping over their must-have baggy jeans, dipping long sleeves in their art project, or freezing in the playground in a skimpy dress.
8. Less Distracting Learning Environment Looking at what other students are wearing or worrying about what they're wearing can be a big distraction for children. And when fashion trends and keeping up with their peers in the style stakes becomes more of a priority than paying attention in class, a child's progress could easily suffer. By removing fashion as a distraction, school uniforms help keep children focused on their work.
9. Dress for Professional Success School uniforms encourage students to learn the importance of dressing for success and are thought to contribute in a positive way to their attitude and behaviour in school. As they develop an association between their uniform and learning, simply putting on their uniform helps a child get into the right mindset, preparing them for a day of working hard and focusing.

The Many Benefits of School Uniforms As this list shows, the benefits of school uniforms touch on a lot of the different issues and concerns facing children and their parents today. From reducing bullying to increasing safety, cutting distractions to encouraging cohesion, it's safe to say that convincing people why uniforms are good is an easy task. The Ministry of Education has issued that it is not compulsory for students to wear uniforms to school as schools reopen on March 1. Students are allowed to wear normal attire until March 26 and no disciplinary action will be taken until then. With school uniforms, students are expected to wear a certain look to go to school. School uniforms are different from one school to another and that is one of the reasons why it remains relevant today - it gives students an identity. The debate about whether or not students should wear uniforms to school has never stopped. Opponents argue that school uniforms suppress students' creativity and self-expression. But hey, school uniforms have their own style and here are ten reasons why school uniforms actually rock and why students should embrace wearing them.

1. You won't get distracted with fashion in the classroom. When everyone wears the same piece of clothing, what is there to be distracted from, right? You won't bother to think of asking your parents to get that pair of shoes that your classmate is wearing in the middle of a Science class. Students are at school to learn. Thus, anything that serves as a distraction should not be simply tolerated.
2. Instill a sense of equality among students. Unhealthy competition about clothes can be reduced when students' expectations of each other are the same. It takes the burden off both parents and students from having to keep up with the latest trend in order to fit in with everyone else. Wearing matching outfits will also instill in the students a sense of equality and remove economic barriers built by branded or fashionable clothes. Peer pressure? Not today.
3. It makes getting dressed each morning easier. Honestly, there's nothing more blissful than waking up in the morning and knowing that you already have a suit to wear. Being indecisive about what to wear takes so much of your time and it is better that you spend it eating breakfast instead! Moms and dads also have one less thing to worry about from their morning to-do list.
4. Enhance academic performance. Wearing a school uniform will not directly improve your academic performance, but as mentioned, it reduces distractions in the classroom. Staying focused in the classroom is key to better understanding what you are learning and hopefully you will have all the As in your hand!
5. Foster a sense of belonging to your institution. School uniforms can certainly promote the sense of belonging towards your school as you proudly carry the badge on you all day. It creates an identity among students and staff, while encouraging the value of togetherness and unity. While you appear the same with everyone at school, uniforms help to distinguish you from other institutions when there are outbound students coming to your school.
6. Reduce bullying. Wearing a school uniform is not the solution to halt bullying, but it does help to take the edge off verbal bullying about someone's appearance. Nobody will judge anybody based on the price or brand of the blazer or pants they wear since everyone is wearing the same white shirt and blue skirt which originated from the same supplier.
7. Prepare you to dress smartly for the future. School uniforms place the emphasis on professionalism. Workforce allows everyone to have a sense of fashion but there are still guidelines that need to be followed. Thus, school uniforms are a good practice for children to have a taste of professionalism in regards to their appearance as they have to appear smartly dressed on a day to day basis.
8. Promote better discipline. You must be wondering, how do school uniforms promote discipline? Well, discipline is the practice of training someone to obey by the code of behaviour. At school, students have an array of rules that they have to abide to avoid going through punishments, and wearing the school uniform is one of them. To be a successful student, you have to be disciplined and wearing the school uniform is a good way to start.
9. Cost effective. The idea that school uniforms are cost effective is debatable, surely. However, wearing a school uniform limits the purchase of everyday clothes. But more than that, parents have to spend money on uniforms just at the beginning of the school year and they could last for a good two years if you diligently give them a good treatment. A tip, it is best if you could buy one size bigger for your kids as kids outgrow their clothes really fast!
10. Count the days to... the weekend! Most importantly, school uniforms set a reminder that you have the weekend to look forward to for playing dress up! All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, it's true. Looking forward to quality time during the weekend is a good practice for a balanced society. Being free from school uniforms on the weekends will stimulate children's creativity to express themselves through their choice of clothing.
